As the signal in the village is very poor and a dongle could easily get misplaced this was considered not to be an option. It was agreed to put as an agenda item in the New Year, to review whether an internet connection is necessary.

Buckland Newton Parish Council STRONGLY OBJECTS to the removal of the above telephone boxes, they wish to keep both telephone boxes in working order. The telephone boxes are an important asset to the community because
	 The mobile signal in Buckland Newton and Henley is very poor and in some parts of the village it is non-existent, therefore they are required if an emergency arises. Some of the parishioners do not own a mobile telephone. People staying in local holiday accommodation may need to use them. There is no public telephone in the local public house for customers to use if they require a taxi. The Parish Pavilion has recently been refurbished and the Parish Field now has an all-weather track around it. It is expected that these facilities will have increased use, especially for sporting events. As there is no telephone in the Parish Pavilion and the

- especially for sporting events. As there is no telephone in the Parish Pavilion and the
 - mobile reception is non-existent in this part of the village, the telephone box will be required in an emergency.
- They have historic importance to the village. The telephone box near the Gaggle of Geese is adjacent to the property (Wheelwrights) which was originally the Post Office. The junction at Henley where the telephone box is situated has ancient importance. It marks where the medieval coffin road from Plush, met Landscombe Lane from Sturminster Newton to go through Henley and into Buckland Newton via Hilling Lane. It is therefore a landmark for both drivers and residents as it marks an important point in the history of Buckland Newton traffic, whether on foot, horse or wheels.
- The Parish Council have received numerous emails from parishioners who want the telephone boxes kept in working order; again because of poor mobile signal service.
- There has been a petition in the village shop and in the pub which holds 38 signatures from parishioners who wish to see the telephone boxes remain in situ with the telephone equipment in working order.

	• The Parish Clerk has contacted the Planning Department and BT to clarify the planning
